An Critical Analysis on The United Nation Model Law 2004 vis-à-vis The Indian Extradition Act, 1962 as amended in 1993

Dr. Ravindra S. Kale

Associate Professor, Dr. Panjabrao Deshmukh College of Law, Amravati

Introduction

Attachment of human rights ideology with extradition law is necessary to suppress the terrorism and transnational crimes. Transnational crimes mainly include drug trafficking, illegal firearms trafficking, money laundering, and human trafficking in addition to terrorism. The researcher has planned to discuss on these crimes with the mechanisms for the suppression of these crimes. The concept of law of extradition and its international perspective can be studied through an interlinking of law of extradition with human rights ideology; as human rights ideology is an international perspective. The main theme of this paper is based on the concept of suppression of terrorism and other transnational crimes. The researcher has also decided to cover legislative responses for prevention of transnational crimes in India.

In order to study the concept of suppression of terrorism it is necessary to discuss the Human Rights ideology in dealing with terrorists. International Conventions for the suppression of terrorism are also covered within the ambit of law of extradition. At present age, suppression of terrorism, other transnational crimes and international crimes has become a great challenge. Especially terrorism is threatening the national as well as international security.

The U. N. Model Law vis-à-vis The Indian Extradition Act:

According to U. N. Model Law, the legal basis for extradition can be a treaty, agreement, comity, reciprocity, diplomatic assurance or the interests of justice.⁶ Under the Indian Extradition Act, a person can be extradited to a foreign state with which it has treaty or arrangement. Extradition can be allowed even to a foreign state which is not a treaty state⁷; with regard to extradition offence defined as an offence punishable with a term which shall not be less than one year under the laws of India or of a foreign state and includes a compound offence. India can also grant extradition on considerations of comity, reciprocity, diplomatic assurance or in the interests of justice.⁸ 'Interest of justice' is a term with wide scope. Thus, a scope of grant of extradition is much wider under the Indian law as compared to U.N. Model Law.

Model Law in defining extraditable offence takes into consideration the criteria of minimum sentence apart from what is contained in extradition treaty.⁹ India has also adopted the same approach.¹⁰ In Model Law however, the term 'extradition offence' omits from its purview those offences the extradition of a person who has been sentenced to imprisonment or other deprivation of liberty imposed for such an offence, as defined in sub-section (1), shall not be granted unless [may only be granted if] a period of at least [six] months of such sentence remains to be served or a more severe punishment remains to be carried out. Similar provisions are not there under the Indian Extradition Act.

According to Model Law, "Extradition treaty" includes a bilateral treaty concluded between [country adopting the law] and a foreign country, or a multilateral treaty to which [country adopting the law] is a party, which contains provisions governing extradition of persons who are present in the territory of [country adopting the law].¹¹ Similar approach is adopted by India under its Extradition Law.¹²

According to Model Law, grounds of refusal of extradition include political offences. The Model Law says where the requested state to any multilateral convention or bilateral treaty or

⁷ Section 3 of Model Law, 2004.

⁸ Section 2(3) of Indian Extradition Act, 1962 as amended in 1993.

⁹ 'Treaty' includes extradition arrangements.

arrangement according to which the offence in question is not to be considered as offences of a political nature for the purpose of extradition or to take prosecutorial action in lieu of extradition, the exception of political offence be not implored. Political offence is a ground of refusal of extradition under Indian Law.¹³ The Model Law also provides a list of crimes which may not be considered as political offences.¹⁴ Indian law also follows the suit.¹⁵

According to the U. N. Model Law, extradition must be rejected if, in the view of the [competent authority of country adopting the law], there are substantial grounds to believe that the request for extradition has been made for the purpose of prosecuting or punishing the person sought on account of/on the basis of his race, religion, nationality, ethnic origin, political opinions, sex [gender] or status.¹⁶ Under the Model Law, there is also restriction against extradition if, in the view of the [competent authority of country adopting the law], the person sought [has been or] would be subjected in the requesting state to torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment¹⁷ or if, in the view of the [competent authority of country adopting the law], the person sought [has not received or] would not receive the minimum fair trial guarantees in criminal proceedings in the requesting state.¹⁸ Similar specific clauses are not found under the Indian legislation. However, it contains a comprehensive clause.¹⁹ It refers to the power of Central Government to discharge any fugitive criminal if it appears to it that the offence in question is trivial, or request for surrender is not made in good faith or in the interests of justice or for political reasons or otherwise. Thus, the scope of Section 29 of the Indian Extradition Act is more comprehensive as compared to the separate provisions under Section 5, 6 and 7 of the Model Law.

Military offences are exempted from extradition according to Model Law.²⁰ But no such specific exemption is found in Indian Law.

Principle of prohibition against double jeopardy is contained in both U. N. Model Law (Ne Bis in idem)²¹ as well as Indian Law. The difference between the two is that prohibition against double jeopardy enjoys constitutional guarantee²² in India which is much higher to statutory guarantee. India also provides statutory protection to the principle under Criminal Procedure Code.²³ However, principle of prohibition against double jeopardy is not specified under Indian Extradition Act. But it does not really matter.

Whereas the Model Law provided an option to refuse extradition on the ground that fugitive criminal is a national of requested state.²⁴ Under Indian Extradition Law, nationality of the fugitive criminal is immaterial consideration in considering extradition request.

With regard to the death penalty the Model Law provides- If the offence for which extradition is requested carries the death penalty under the law of the requesting state and is not so punishable under the law of the [country adopting the law], extradition [shall not be granted] [may be refused], unless the competent authorities of the requesting state give assurances considered sufficient that the death penalty will not be imposed or, if imposed, will not be carried out. Indian Law is silent in this regard. India has not abolished death penalty but retained it in the rarest of the rare circumstances. However, keeping in mind the problem of possible refusal by the requesting state to send the requested fugitive criminal to India because of the possibility of imposition of capital punishment to him, the Extradition Act provides that where a fugitive criminal, who has committed an extradition offence punishable with death penalty, is surrendered or returned by foreign state to India and such
